Lounsbury Lingo

You will notice a wide variety of surname spellings associated with the Lounsbury Tree. The most common spelling is “Lounsbury” though “Lounsberry” and “Lounsbery” are also prevalent. In 99% of researched cases, Canadians and Americans with these surname spellings are linked by common ancestors: Richard Lounsbury and Elizabeth (Pennoyer) Lounsbury of what is now Rye, NY, who were married there in 1670. There are many other surname variations who fit our extended family tree, including Lansbury (though apparently not the famous actress Angela Lansbury), Lainspeary, and Lonsberry.

For simplicity, we use the letter “L” to denote the surname regardless of its spelling. Hence the phrasing “L” Tree at the top of this page.

From Rodolphus Lounsbury to my Grandmother

Part Two
by Bob Fraser

Genesee Lounsbury was the eldest of eight children born to Hiram Stafford Lounsbury and Ellen Jane Morse.

Jenny outlived them all. Her next younger sibling was Frank Wesley Lounsbury, born 21 February 1875 also in Elmwood, located in Tuscola County in the rich farmland of the “thumb” of Michigan. They loved to hunt. The earliest picture I have of Frank is with his younger brother George and a cousin W.C. Morse at a hunting camp in the Riding Mountains, Manitoba in 1898. Frank (second from right) was 23 and George (second from left) was 19. (The two men flanking George share the same last name. I can’t quite make out the letters following the “Mc” except for the final “y.” The older one on the left has an initial “D.” and the younger an “A.” If it is “McCready,” it would be family of Dick McCready who married Ida Gladys Lounsbury. A more formal picture of Frank is below. Frank was 42 when he married Louisa Mettam on 25 July 1917 in Grandview, Manitoba. Louisa, or “Louie” as she was known, was born in Chesterfield, Derbyshire, England in 1869 and emigrated to Montreal on the SS Southwark in 1907. When she met Frank, she was a widow.

In the early depression years, many in the family moved back to farm property owned for several years by Jennie, in western Ontario, to Oxdrift. When the crash came in the depression, Harry Fraser (Jenny’s husband) had $9,000 out in credit and the Raleigh company foreclosed on all the properties in his name to recoup their losses. Fortunately the Oxdrift property was in Jenny’s name. The directions to the farm were “four miles north of the rail line.” After a while they were able to spend winters in Dryden, but the farm in Oxdrift provided food for the table. The picture on the next page shows George and Frank in the middle with Jenny’s first born... son Mervin on the right and his daughter Frances on the left. The date on the picture is July 1925, so obviously some use was made of the property earlier. Fishing in the Wabigoon River and hunting for moose and other game in the Oxdrift area were great and the three men pictured were avid sportsmen.

Family history suggests Frank was no “catch.” He was lazy. Alec was a “special needs” child, physically able but mentally challenged. Frank gained not only a wife, but a boy to do all the little chores Frank was unwilling to do. When Alec was a teenager, he was offered an opportunity to move to an assisted living facility. He left and never looked back. At some point, they moved to British Columbia. Louie’s sister Florence had sailed from England to Montreal on the SS Duchess of Bedford in 1930. A decade later she moved to British Columbia as well; several of the Lounsbury family had moved there in the late 1930’s, including Harry and Jenny Fraser who had moved from Ontario soon after their son Clarence (“Carney”) had moved west. I do not know whether she lived in the same house with Frank and her sister Louie, but if elsewhere she must have been frequently in their home. After Louis died in March 1955, Frank married Florence. She was two years older than he, born 13 May 1873 in Chesterfield, Derbyshire, England. She died at their home on the last day of October 1960. Frank lived four years longer, until June 27, 1964.

Elva Izara Lounsbury was the third child born to Hiram and Ellen in Elmwood, Michigan. She was born in the summer of 1877 on July 25. She did not live ten years. She died in Tamarisk, Manitoba on the 27 of March 1887.

George Henry Lounsbury, also of Elmwood, was born two years to the day after Elva, on 25 July 1879. George was known as a "good fellow, the best of the lot." He married about the beginning of the twentieth century. His wife Violet died of hyperthyroid in the first year of their marriage. He never remarried.

George was a house-building carpenter (not a finish carpenter) and also cut hair in lumber camps for 25 cents apiece. He was a hard worker. About 1929 or 1930, he fell off a ladder painting Jack Skene's (Skene's?) grocery store, the ladder broke, resulting in a bad fall for George. He developed arthritis in one leg and began to limp badly. Like many in the family, he moved to the greater Vancouver, British Columbia area near the beginning of the Second World War. His older sister Jenny with husband Harry had joined their son Clarence (“Carney”) about the same time and had moved in with him when he purchased property in New Westminster in the early 1940’s.

One of George’s nephews was a physician and had read that inducing diphtheria (or typhoid fever) using "dead" cells was a treatment for arthritis. So about 1950, George checked into St. Paul's in Vancouver. He was put in a basket like cover and a 104 degree F temp was induced for 2-4 days. It cleared up his arthritis for four years. He died of kidney failure in Richmond, B.C. on 3 May 1964.

and his wife Gladys Lounsbury McCready, Ellen Lounsbury, Hiram Lounsbury and Frank Lounsbury. Dick and Gladys had two sons, Claire and Arthur. It was not a happy marriage and Gladys took to bed, probably suffering from depression. I have pictures of young grandchildren who are probably alive as of this writing.

Laura Dell Lounsbury was also born in Wheatley, Ontario on 17 May 1885. The earliest picture I have (left) shows a carefree spirit with her happy brother George, six years her senior. A more formal picture (right) is a more serious pose and definitely a more serious hairdo.

Laura married James Thomas Delgatty on 28 December 1904 in the same place he was born: Gilbert Plains, Manitoba. He was a strong man and the marriage was blessed with two sons, Roderick and Reginald. The dates I have for their births are October 1905 and April 1907, although some understand them to have been twins. This one picture I have of them – in a wash tub – shows them to be similar in size at least. Tragedy struck in 1911 when both died, apparently on the same day, the eleventh of March. Stories conflict whether it was rubella (German measles) or cholera that struck them down. The calamity caused further consequence: the marriage did not survive the grieving.

Laura did have happier days ahead. She was a skilled seamstress and always able to find work. Part of her life she lived in Michigan; one of my cousins recalls her living in the Detroit area. Laura married at least two more times. The next known marriage was to a man called “Toot” Toutant or Toutante (seen at right). I have no given name other than his nick name.

Her final marriage was to William Martin Loader, (above left with her and at right) known as “Bill.” (6 Oct 1910 – 28 Aug 1982). They settled in Pinellas, Florida. She preceded him in death by 15 years dying in February 1967.

Asa Burrell (or Burwill) Lounsbury was born 6 July 1892 in Hilton, Manitoba. His oldest sister, Jenny, had given birth to her first child Mervin in nearby Elkhorn six weeks earlier. They grew up like brothers. Jenny’s home was always welcoming to missionaries and itinerant preachers. The whole family enjoyed a good laugh. When one “proper” missionary lady was their guest, Asa and Merv decided to have a little fun. They sprinkled an effervescent powder in her chamber pot and slid it back under her bed. In the wee hours of the morning they heard a startled exclamation, followed by the sound of hurried feet going down the hallway to knock on Grandma’s bedroom door. The next morning as all gathered around the table for breakfast, the two boys worked hard to keep a straight face. Jenny had a twinkle in her eye as she glanced their way. Nothing was ever mentioned about the incident in the days that followed, but it became part of the family lore. The picture at the bottom left of the previous page shows most of the members of the Lounsbury family that lived to adulthood: George, Asa, Laura, Ellen, Hiram, Jenny and Frank. The winter scene on the left has Laura and Asa bracketed by their parents Hiram and Ellen. I know little of the adult life of Asa. “Acey” moved out to the Vancouver area as well but did not seem to mingle with the rest of the family. He had developed a poor reputation, aided and abetted by a love for the bottle. I do not know if he ever married. He died in Vancouver on 26 December 1960.

The youngest child of Hiram and Ellen was Leander Morse, born back in Elmwood, Michigan on 3 October 1893. He died a year later in Tamarisk, Manitoba. So ends the story as I know it of my grandmother’s generation.

Louhsberry Residence: I ran across the photograph on the internet. It was a Lounsberry farm for sale and the house was reported to be built in the late 1700’s. Unfortunately I could not find it again. Does anyone know anymore about it?

A quiet wedding was held at the home of Mrs. and Mr. Richard Lansberry at 8:30 last evening when her daughter Ruth and Otto D. Shaw, of Bigler were united in marriage by the Rev. E. G. Spessard of the U. B. church. The bride is a graduate of the Philipsburg high school of the class of 1915. The groom is a popular young man of Bigler and both have many friends in the two villages who wish them happiness in their new life. Only immediate relatives and friends attended the wedding, and a delightful supper was served after the ceremony. About fifty youngsters of the village serenaded the newlyweds (source Kephart-pierce Family – Ancestry.com)
Alice Gwendolyn Lounsbury/Parker turned 102 on Oct 6, 2008. A large gathering of relatives met for the 13th straight year to celebrate the event. With two children and their spouses to keep track of her, she still lives alone in her own home. The picture above is her with her grandfather circa 1917. Her "line", I guess you call it, is Richard, Richard, Henry, Nathan, Nathan, Daniel, Ira, Benjamin, Benjamin. She is the eldest of seven children of Benjamin Howard Lounsbury and Edna May Woodruff L. The only other surviving child is Elinore, the youngest (83).
Linking the linguistic Lounsburys

Benjamin Zimmer

In a post last February I wrote about Yale professor of language and literature Thomas R. Lounsbury (1838-1915), whose 1908 book The Standard of Usage in English bucked the priggish prescriptivism of the era. More recently, Arnold Zwicky hailed his English Spelling and Spelling Reform as “a bracing, sharp-tongued book” full of “elegant rants.” Lounsbury also played a major role in the history of language study at Yale, along with his more famous colleague William Dwight Whitney. In my February post I wrote that Thomas Lounsbury was not (as far as I knew) related to the anthropological linguist Floyd Lounsbury (1914-1998), an expert on North American and Mesoamerican indigenous languages who taught at Yale several decades later. It turns out the two language-loving Lounsburys were indeed related, but rather distantly: they were third cousins thrice removed.

To check on the Lounsbury linkage, I first contacted Hal Conklin, Floyd Lounsbury's longtime colleague in the Yale Department of Anthropology. (I had the pleasure of working as Hal's research assistant when I was an undergrad at Yale.) Hal informed me that Floyd, who hailed from Wisconsin, had looked into the genealogical connection with Thomas Lounsbury when he was working on Iroquoian languages spoken not far from Thomas's birthplace in upstate New York. Given Floyd's intense interest in kinship systems, it's only natural that he'd want to track down his kinship with his Yale namesake. I also got in touch with Floyd's daughter, documentary filmmaker and novelist Ruth Ozeki, who confirmed that her father had investigated his distant relation with Thomas Lounsbury, though the genealogical records he compiled aren't readily locatable in the family files.

An absence of print records is not much of a hindrance in this age of electronic research, however. I was able to piece together the Lounsbury genealogy on my own from various online sources, and then Bill McDonald, editor of the genealogical newsletter The Lounsbury Tree, was kind enough to corroborate my findings. Here's the full scoop.

The connection between the two Lounsburys goes all the way back to Henry Lounsbury (1684-1758), son of Richard, the first Lounsbury to immigrate from England to America. Henry lived in Stamford, Connecticut, which would be the home of many Lounsburys. One son of Henry, Epenetus, had a son James, who settled in Newtown, New York (now Elmira). James had a son named Thomas, who became a Presbyterian pastor in Ovid, New York, a bit north of Elmira near Seneca Lake. One of the minister's sons was Thomas Raynesford Lounsbury, born in Ovid in 1838.

Floyd's branch of the family tree descends from another son of Henry, Nathan Lounsbury. Two of Nathan's great-grandsons, Phineas and George, were governors of Connecticut in the late 19th century. Another great-grandson, Ira Davis Lounsbury, moved out west to Wisconsin. Ira Davis was the great-grandfather of Floyd Glenn Lounsbury, born in Stevens Point, Wisconsin in 1914. So, since Ira Davis Lounsbury was a third cousin of Thomas R. Lounsbury (their great-grandfathers were brothers), that makes Floyd and Thomas third cousins three times removed.

The complete family tree, as far as I've been able to establish it, follows below.

1 Henry Lounsbury; b: 15 Aug 1684 in Rye, NY; d: 08 Oct 1758 in Stamford, CT

Of Greek Revival style, the store adjoining the Post Office was put up by Richard P. Lounsbery to replace a nearby one that had been burned down. It was the village A & P for many years. In 1972, it was purchased by the Bedford New York Historical Society along with the Post Office. It was home to Village Green Antiques and from 1993 to 1997 the historical society had its offices on the second floor. The building is currently leased to the Horse Connection & Barbour Country Clothes.

Perley E. Lonsbury

PERLEY E. LONSBURY - An excellent farming property of one hundred and twenty acres, situated on section 17, Watson township, is the birthplace of Perley E. Lonsbury, his natal day being February 4, 1857, and this property has continued to be his home to the present time. The Lonsbury family was established in Michigan at an early day, the grandfather of our subject having removed from New York to this state, their location being Lenawee county. The father of our subject, Nehemiah K. Lonsbury, was born near Catskill, New York, April 1, 1818, and when quite young was taken by his parents to Wayne county, that state, where he lived until a youth of seventeen years, when he accompanied his father's family to this state, remaining with them in Lenawee county, during the succeeding two years. In 1837, when a youth of nineteen years, he packed his few belongings and made his way to Allegan county, walking the entire distance, much of the journey being through the forests; for much of the country was still in its wild and uncultivated state at that early epoch. He had some relatives living in this section of the state and he at once made his way to where they were located, and soon after his arrival here he entered a claim of one hundred and twenty acres of land from the government. He at once began the work of clearing the land, plowing the fields, planting the seed and in due course of time he gathered rich harvests as a reward for the labor he had bestowed upon the land. He made all of the improvements which are here seen at the present time and it is today a valuable and well improved property. He endured many trials and hardships during that pioneer period, and he took a deep and helpful interest in much of the development and progress which was carried on from year to year. Mr. Lonsbury was married in Allegan county, when twenty-four years of age, to Miss Lucy Ann Miner, who was born in Canada, September 23, 1817, and when she was very young her parents, Clement and Lucy Miner, removed to Monroe county, New York, where she was reared and educated, and there the family made their. Home until 1837, when they took up their abode in Lenawee county, this state, where the father died at a comparatively early age. His widow survived for a long period, when she, too, passed away in Watson, Allegan county, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. In the family of Mrs. Lonsbury were fifteen children, of whom nine reached mature years, while six of the number died before they reached the age of nine years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Nehemiah Lonsbury passed away in this county, the latter dying May 15, 1893, while the death of the former occurred January 8, 1889. They were highly respected people in the county where they so long made their home, being numbered among its pioneer settlers.

Perley E. Lonsbury aided his father in the development of the home property, and was early trained to habits of industry and economy. He has always made, his home on his present farm, this property being inherited by him upon his father's death, and here he continues to carry forward the work which was begun by his father almost seven decades ago. In addition to his agricultural interests Mr. Lonsbury is engaged quite extensively in the raising of stock, and makes a specialty of Shropshire sheep, having imported the head of his herd from Canada. He has met with very gratifying success in both his farming and stock-raising interests and his property constitutes one of the good farms of Allegan county.

Choosing as a companion and helpmate for life's journey, Mr. Lonsbury was united in marriage to Miss Laura J. Wismer, the wedding ceremony being performed January 16, 1879. She is a native of Canada, born August 17, 1858, and she accompanied her parents, Jacob E. and Sarah Wismer, on their removal from that country to Michigan. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Lonsbury has been born one daughter, Beatrice M., who is still under the parental roof. Mr. Lonsbury, following in the political footsteps of his father, gives stalwart support to the Republican party; and although reared in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which the parents belonged, he holds membership with the Christian denomination, at Watkin's Corners. Both he and his wife are hospitable people and enjoy the warm friendship of many with whom they are associated: The place on which Mr. Lonsbury has always resided has become endeared to him through the associations of his boyhood and youth, and his is one of the well kept and attractive homes of this section of the county. HELEN BURNS, 92, went home to be with the Lord on January 6. Interment will be near her husband at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Virginia. A celebration of her life will be held Saturday, January 24 at 1 p.m. at Sierra Vista Presbyterian Church located on Highway 41 at the south end of Oakhurst. Mrs. Burns was born July 8, 1911 in Adair County, Iowa. She was the middle child of eight children born to Benjamin Howard Lounsberry and Edna May Woodruff. In 1929, Mrs. Burns graduated from nursing school at Mahaska Hospital in Iowa. She soon moved to Chicago to study pediatrics at Cook County Hospital and worked in that specialty her entire career. She remained at Cook County Hospital for 10 years and became Head Nurse. Mrs. Burns met her future husband, Robert (Bob) Burns in Chicago in 1941.
In 1981, Helen's sister Elinore, and her husband Al Burns, convinced Helen it was time to move to California.

Helen agreed, bought ten acres in Mariposa, and lived with Elinore and Al while her house was being built.

Helen Burns was an independent spirit with a mischievous grin and will be remembered fondly by her family and friends. Remembrances may be sent to the Deacon Board of Sierra Vista Presbyterian Church.

LANSBERRY, PETERSON-WINIFRED (FREDDIE)
Winifred (Freddie) Lansberry passed away on November 18, 2008 in Mission Viejo, CA after complications from heart surgery. Freddie was born on September 5, 1923 in Ophir near Telluride, Colorado, where her father Bert Lansberry worked and later lost his life in the silver mines. Freddie and her siblings faced many challenges growing up in the Four Corners area during the Great Depression of the 1930's. She was taken in by a loving family in Cortez, Colorado where she attended school and was very active as a cheerleader and member of the choir. She later worked in the abstract and title field before relocating to Dallas, Texas with her husband. Frank Pool. Freddie had a great love for people and nature, spending many hours working in her beautiful garden in Denver where she spent the latter part of her life. She always had a way of adding a cheery smile, a positive outlook and a touch of class wherever she went. She will be greatly missed. Freddie is survived by her son, James H. Pool, Dana Point, California. She was predeceased by her husband of 15 years, Elmer H. (Pete) Peterson, Jr., Denver, CO., sisters, Elsie Davis, Alberta Finch, Mary lou Morrison and brother Calvin Lansberry, all from New Mexico

Editor’s Note: Can anyone give me her ancestry?

HEWITT V. LOUNSBURY was born in St. Paul, Minnesota on February 22, 1911.

Mr. Lounsbury came to Alaska with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in the spring of 1944. In 1946, he started L & W Candies (which later became Brownie Bear Candies). In 1949, he founded Hewitt V. Lounsbury and Associates, a surveying and engineering firm.

Mr. Lounsbury was very active in the Anchorage community. From 1958 to 1959, he served as the Mayor of Anchorage. He was a member of the Anchorage City Council, the Alaska Society of Professional Land Surveyors and the Downtown Rotary.

Mr. Lounsbury died on January 8, 1971, in Honolulu, Hawaii. He is survived by his wife, Esther, and their three sons, Loren, Joel and Jon.

Editor’s Note: Who were his parents?

A celebration of her life will be announced later. She was the youngest of four sisters, born July 3, 1914, in Kenmare, N.D., to Clinton and Effie Rogers. She married Hewitt Lounsbury in 1932. She and her family moved to Anchorage in 1944.

She was honored many times for her civic and charitable contributions to the community. She was president of the Anchorage Soroptimist Club, president of the Anchorage Concert Association, president of the Salvation Army Auxiliary and participated in many other civic and charitable organizations.

She is survived by her husband, William Nugent of Anchorage; a sister in Utah; three sons and their wives, Loren and Susan Lounsbury and Joel and Barbara Lounsbury of Anchorage, and Jon and Susan Lounsbury of Boulder, Colo.; two stepchildren in Washington; seven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Donations to her memory are suggested to Anchorage Concert Association, Salvation Army or the Alaska Center for the Performing Arts.

Arrangements are with Evergreen Memorial Chapel.

My name is Patricia McIntosh Hendrickson and I am a family researcher. I have a rather distantly related request: My 3x great grandparents, Arthur and Mary (Skinner) McIntosh, had a daughter named Jane McIntosh (1823-1897) who married John Marlatt. Jane was born in the Niagara region of Upper Canada but immigrated with her husband to Manitoba. Their daughter, Mary Agnes Marlett (1852-1923) married John Winder Lounsberry (1849-1925). Mary and John are buried in Treherne, Manitoba. I was wondering if any of the Lounsberry/Lounsbury researchers have worked on this family line as I have hit a brick wall in finding the parents or birthplace of Arthur McIntosh and hoped that maybe someone else has worked on this branch of the Lounsberry Tree? When in Bolivar, New York, visit The Pioneer Oil Museum

Bolivar school teacher Kelly Lounsberry, far left, devotes considerable hours to maintaining the 1830s building that is the Pioneer Oil Museum of New York. As museum director, he appreciates the volunteers who educate visitors about almost 150 years of exploration heritage in southwest New York. Among them are the museum’s board chairman, Paul Plants, president of the New York State Oil Producers Assoc., and retired independent oilman Ray Payne. The museum and its collection will be preserved thanks to a $10,000 grant from the state to build more space. A host of local volunteers, many who grew up in the Pennsylvania-New York border region, help focused on building the new museum wing. Lounsberry invites oilfield history detectives to call the museum at (585)928-1344.
When you and I were Young Maggie

When You and I Were Young, Maggie
I wandered today to the hill, Maggie
To watch the scene below
The creek and the rusty old mill, Maggie
Where we sat in the long, long ago.
The green grove is gone from the hill, Maggie
Where first the daisies sprung
The old rusty mill is still, Maggie
Since you and I were young.
A city so silent and lone, Maggie
Where the young and the gay and the best
In polished white mansion of stone, Maggie
Have each found a place of rest
Is built where the birds used to play, Maggie
And join in the songs that were sung
For we sang just as gay as they, Maggie
When you and I were young.

They say I am feeble with age, Maggie
My steps are less sprightly than then
My face is a well written page, Maggie
But time alone was the pen.
They say we are aged and grey, Maggie
As spray by the white breakers flung
But to me you're as fair as you were, Maggie
When you and I were young.

And now we are aged and grey, Maggie
The trials of life nearly done
Let us sing of the days that are gone, Maggie
When you and I were young.

Editor’s Note – I am taking some liberty here. George Washington Johnson was a second cousin of my great-great-grandmother Servilia Merritt (1822-1887) who married Sylvester Lounsbury (1821-1885). George Washington Johnson (1837 – 1917) earned his first class teaching certificate at the Central School in Hamilton, Ontario. In 1859 he began teaching at SS No. 5, Glanford Township, Wentworth County, Ontario where one of his students was Maggie Clark (1842 – 1865). In 1864 he published a volume of verse, Maple Leaves, which included the lyric "When You and I Were Young, Maggie".

In that same year George and Maggie were married and George took a job as a newspaperman in Buffalo and then Cleveland.

After only seven months of marriage, Maggie died, on May 12, 1865 and is buried in the White Church graveyard in Glanford.

In 1866 J.A. Butterfield set the poem to music and it went on to become one of the most popular tunes around the world.

George married twice more and died on January 2, 1917 at Pasadena, California. He is buried in the Hamilton Cemetery.
