Lounsbury Lingo

You will notice a wide variety of surname spellings associated with the Lounsbury Tree. The most common spelling is "Lounsbury" though "Lounsberry" and "Lounsbery" are also prevalent. In 99% of researched cases, Canadians and Americans with these surname spellings are linked by common ancestors: Richard Lounsbury and Elizabeth (Pennoyer) Lounsbury of what is now Rye, NY, who were married there in 1670. There are many other surname variations who fit our extended family tree, including Lansbury (though apparently not the famous actress Angela Lansbury), Lainspeary, and Lonsberry.

For simplicity, we use the letter "L" to denote the surname regardless of its spelling. Hence the phrasing "L" Tree at the top of this page.

Passings

Alton Lewis Lounsbury passed away on Thanksgiving Day the 29th of November 2010. He lived a long and full life and will be long remembered. I first met Al and his wife Corabelle during the planning for the “L” family reunion which was subsequently held in conjunction with their branch reunion at Bolivar, New York in 1993. Al and Corabelle celebrated their 50th wedding during the reunion. This reunion was a very successful reunion in no small way because of the work of Al and Corabelle. The memories of the Bolivar reunion seem very fresh but are saddened by the thoughts of the participants who have since passed away.

Our sympathy goes out to Corabelle and family on the occasion of their loss. Below is a summary of the eulogy delivered by Al’s son Gary at the funeral.

Al Lounsbury—November 29, 2010

- This is a summary of the remarks made at my father’s funeral, Scio Church of Christ, Scio, New York, on November 29, 2010. Dad died early on Thanksgiving morning, November 25.
- We have been given the gift and privilege of having Dad with us for 92 Years. By his own estimation, he has had a great and productive life. He enjoyed at least 90 of those years—the last two, not so much.
 - Even as his physical health deteriorated, he retained his great mind and engagement with the world.
 - He is likely to have been the only person here who knows all of you, your family from youngest to oldest, and your complete life story. What a treasure it would have been to be able to completely download his memory banks.
- Dad was born to James Addison Lounsbury and Myrtle Wyse Lounsbury in the Town of Ward, Allegany County, New York, on Vandermark Road at the place now known as the “EE-EI-O” farm. We have never quite figured out Grandpa and Grandma’s family planning: they had four children (Leon, Lura, Clifford, Alene) close together, then waited ten years and had four more (Albert, Alton, Pearl, James L.—“Milo”). Dad was the second child (after Albert) in the younger group. At the time, there were no utilities on the Vandermark—no electric, no gas, no indoor plumbing. All farming and transportation was done with horses.
- Dad was a story teller. He remembered every person and event that he encountered over his 92 years, and he had a story, an anecdote, or a joke about nearly all of them. While in some public settings, he may have seemed quiet; he was just not continually talking,—or running off at the mouth, as Dad would say— he was observing and assessing the people and events.
 - In more intimate settings, he could hold forth for hours recounting tales and observations. The most frequent of those settings was the kitchen table where on any given day; you could find almost anyone (his brothers, a foreign missionary, a union steward, the town superintendent) gathered for a chat and storytelling. While he was still with us, Dad’s younger brother Milo was the most consistent fellow storyteller. The two of them took turns being the straight man and delivering the punch line.
- We have 92 years of material to work with here, but in the interest of time I am going to select just a few of those stories to highlight some of Dad’s personal qualities.
- According to his parents and family, from an early age (by 5 or 6), Dad was the first one up in the morning. He lit all the fires in the cook and heating stoves, lit the kerosene lanterns in the kitchen and got everything ready for Grandma to come down and start breakfast. Dad then got cleaned up and dressed for the day. Dad has always been industrious and productive, interested in dressing properly for the occasion, and could charm ladies of any age—through being courteous, considerate, and attentive.
- As he was growing up during the Depression and Prohibition; the family farm produced all that was needed for basic survival. They had a dairy herd, raised chickens and turkeys, and grew a large vegetable garden. Most other goods were obtained through barter of farm goods or labor. The problem was coming up with cash to buy goods like clothes for a fashion conscious teen. So, Dad trapped muskrat that he could sell for a $1 per skin and he had a job at the Town of Ward country school coming in early to start the fires and keep the stoves cleaned out and supplied with wood . He was paid $1 per month. From this he saved $9 to order some sharp dress boots from the Sears catalog. After about two weeks he received his order only to discover that the package and one boot had a big slash in them. This was Prohibition and the Post Office ran a knife through any package they thought could contain a bottle of alcohol. So Dad returned the package to Sears for replacement, only to have the same thing happen again. Finally on the third try, the Post Office used something like a needle that only made a tiny hole, Dad was able to cover this up with polish and an inside patch so he kept this pair. Persistence and ingenuity prevailed.

- Dad liked school and learning, especially history and reading. Grandpa was the Trustee for the Ward school and to some criticism from the community; he spent every nickel of the budget every year buying encyclopedias, dictionaries, reference books, microscopes and telescopes for the school. It was the best equipped country school in the district. Dad came in early and stayed late for his job, but also to read the books—can you imagine anyone that will just start reading the encyclopedia from cover to cover?
 - Dad wanted to go to high school and the only way he could do that was to move into the metropolis of Scio. So, during the school year, Dad lived in Scio with the Walthers—his sister, Lura, and her family: Phil, Thelma, and Bum (Phillip Jr.). Dad was really nervous about going to that big Scio High School where you had to change classrooms and the first day, he did go into one wrong class with the town kids laughing at the county bumpkin. But that was the last mistake, and he soon observed that he was doing as well as the town kids, but some of his peers from other country schools were having trouble. Their country schools did not have the books that his did, and they did not know how to use the reference material. Dad started informally tutoring them on how to use the dictionaries and encyclopedias because they were embarrassed to ask the town kids.
 - After graduation, Dad was a young man about town and in demand socially. One party he attended, he spotted this attractive younger woman, and when a spirited game of Post Office developed, he was the Post Man who delivered the kiss to Cork (Corabelle) Buckley—the rest is history (67 years of marriage).
- During World War II, Dad served in the U.S. Navy aboard the aircraft carrier U.S. Tulagi in all the major battles of the South Pacific including Iwo Jima, the Philippines, and the occupation of Japan. Here he was, a young man from Allegany County who had never seen the ocean, serving at sea for months at a time. The U.S.S Tulagi was one of those WW II escort aircraft carriers that were retrofitted on stock hulls. They were mass produced in about four months compared to the years of construction for today’s naval vessels, and required continual work under steam to keep them seaworthy. Dad was a machinist’s mate working primarily in the engine room surrounded by Worthington turbines trying to keep everything working and making repairs on the fly. When we asked Dad if he was ever scared during the battles, he said that most of the time he was so busy, he did not have time to think about it. Usually the carrier was several miles off-shore from the actual battle and he only could see it when he stood watch at night and could see the bombing on the horizon. The most scared he recalled being was when he was serving on the hangar deck as a fireman during a battle where kamikaze planes were targeting the fleet. One ship next to the carrier was hit and exploded. Fortunately, their carrier had excellent gunners (many of whom were American Indians) who brought down all the planes targeting them. Dad formed lasting friendships in the Navy and he and his alphabet buddies (Lott, Lounsbury, and Lukehart) visited each other almost every year as long as they were physically able.
- Fast forward: Dad liked to travel, and automobile was the preferred mode, especially to historical sites, taking the scenic route and along any new route, he liked to stop at every historical marker along the way. My brother, Dan, and I both used to get car sick bouncing around in the back seat before seat belts and car seats. Dan could always seem to fall asleep and survive the whole trip that way. I could not shut my eyes or it got worse, and every swing into a historical marker, delayed the arrival and the end of the agony. So my fervent prayer before every trip was “Lord, please let there be a straight road with no historical markers.” Well, just prior to a planned long trip—I think it was to Canada, Dad read an article theorizing that children’s motion sickness was due a build-up of static electricity in the car. So, Dad rigged up a heavy chain that just touched the road to the axle of the car. And you know what, Dan and I did not get car sick, and I never got car sick after that.

- One aspect of Dad's personality that not too many people witnessed was that he could get spectacularly angry. Usually this anger was directed at inanimate objects. The toaster that burned the toast, the drill that froze was doomed. He would smash the offensive object into bits and then throw it as far as he could—often against a wall. As kids, we learned to get out of throwing range until Dad cooled off. His anger at people was reserved for those he felt were harming others. Since FDR's time, Dad was a life-long Democrat and trade unionist. These views did not always make it easy for someone living in Allegany County. The most heated kitchen table discussion revolved around greedy corporate executives and crooked politicians. When the composition of the table included people like Art Reed, Uncle Milo, and Web Palmer, things could get exciting. But after a point, Dad would usually wind things down with something like: "We have to remember that we are all God's children and we are in this together. We have to dig deep and pray that God will lead those misguided Republicans back to the path of righteousness."
- We could go on for some time with the AI stories and I am sure that each of us have a favorite where Dad listened to you, helped you out, offered some key advice. Dan has some of his to share and I hope that all of you will cherish your stories and continue to tell them, like Dad did.
- I have to believe that somewhere in Heaven there is a huge kitchen table, where Dad is rejoining his old navy buddies and family like Uncle Milo and his other brothers and sisters, Spin Taylor, Art Reed, Phil Walther, Web Palmer, and his countless other friends to resume the big storytelling exchange.

DARIEN FIRE

From the History of Darien Fire Department

1918 – January 3rd was a cold winter night and pipes were freezing all over town, including Mr. Stuart's general store at the corner of Tokeneke and the Boston Post Road. The plumber Elmer Lounsbury was thawing pipes in the store's basement with a torch when a fire started accidentally. The store's floor was soaked with kerosene from the sale of kerosene, which was then in very common usage. The fire moved rapidly as the winter wind spread the fire around the corner, consuming the large Columbia Hotel located where the First Fidelity Bank is today on the corner of Center Street and the Boston Post Road. None of the three Darien volunteer fire companies had equipment to fight a fire of this magnitude and, even with the help of Stamford, New Canaan, and other surrounding towns, the block was a total loss.

Descendants of William H. Lounsbury

Editor's Note It was brought to my attention that we did not know anything about my great-granduncle William H. Lounsbury beyond his marriage to Maggie Sanger on the 28th of May 1877. For some reason I had the name of two children as Iva Pearl and Arza. With some research mainly on Ancestry.com I found the following. I think that this is family despite the many different variations of the spelling of the name in the records. Questions arise as to what happened to Arza and Maggie. I would appreciate all help with clearing up this line.

Rainy River: - June 30 – William Lounsbury, who was arrested in Winnipeg a few days ago and brought to town this morning by Constable McGregor, was charged this afternoon with stealing a pair of boots from Charlebois boarding house about a week ago. He pleaded guilty before Magistrate Clark, and was sentenced to three months in the county jail. Lounsbury has been employed with the Rainy River Lumber Company, and while boarding at Charlebois had frequently been wearing other boarders' apparel. There will probably be other charges brought against him when his three month term expires.
